

Negotiation Meetings, Public Notice

Question:

With the change in law making negotiations open to the public, our district wants to know what the requirements are for these meetings. Will it be necessary to post notices for these meetings?

Answer:

If a majority of your Board is at the negotiation table then yes, you should post as a special board meeting. Otherwise, there is no posting requirement. However, just because there is no required posting does not mean you cannot post. We would advise Districts to determine your meeting schedule and then post that schedule at various locations. It never hurts to do extra posting and to give extra due process.
